School of Criminal Justice and Government Relations

Welcome to the School of Criminal Justice and Government Relations.

Kentucky State University's School of Criminal Justice and Government Relations provides extensive academic instruction for students interested in the criminal justice or political systems. Each program is interdisciplinary drawing upon other academic areas such as sociology and psychology.

Criminal justice provides a foundation in all areas of the criminal justice system. Political science offers three unique specialization options within the political system. Both programs offer Bachelor of Arts degrees and minors. We look forward to helping you determine which program best suits your needs.

Criminal Justice Bachelor of Arts

The baccalaureate degree program in Criminal Justice prepares students for careers in law enforcement, community and institutional corrections, court services, and other criminal justice-related areas. Through a combination of theoretical coursework, practical training, and experiential learning, students develop the knowledge, skills, and ethical principles necessary for employment within the criminal justice system. A baccalaureate degree program in Criminal Justice can provide a basis for advanced study in graduate school or professional programs, such as law school.
